

life of brian 1 cleaning the room

I can't really explain how I spent my summer [redacted] I go back to last December when I first read about the autogyro kit. I had a magazine about helicopters out of the library. I was cleaning my room with my brother Timothy. We [redacted] the same room.

As [redacted], he started playing around, looking [redacted] his old photographs. He has a camera [redacted] father got when the Army sent him to Japan. My father never learned to [redacted] it, but Timothy knew all about cameras. Last year he [redacted] built his own darkroom.

[redacted], Timo always started [redacted] around when mom told us to clean our room. I didn't want to end up [redacted] all the work, so I started going through this magazine.

"Look at this," I said, and Timo came [redacted] to look. Some guy had written an article about a new ultralight autogyro kit. The guy said that a nine-year-old could build it [redacted] a weekend. If a nine-year-old could build it, why couldn't I?
