

family guy /2/ married for children

next question will be about your family. you're married, aren't you? how did you and your wife first meet? when you proposed to her, did she say yes right away or did you have to wait for her to make up her mind?

I've been married for almost fifteen years. my wife and I began dating when we were working together. I was actually the one who hired her. at first I barely noticed her but soon I began to look forward to seeing her walk past my cubicle. one day I worked up the courage to ask her out. we went to see a movie and then we went to this nice little bar down the street. we both had a great time, laughing and telling stories. I'd never felt so comfortable with a girl before. four months later I proposed to her. she took some time to think about it but in the end she said yes. we got married that summer.

do you and your wife still love each other? does she kiss you when you get home from work? do you look forward to talking to her? or are there a lot of fights between the two of you?

I wish I could say we do but it's not that easy. we don't talk to each other as often as we used to. I would be lying if I said I am crazy about Lilly the way I was in the early days. or that I can't wait to see her when I get home from work. the truth is that this marriage has become a habit for both of us. even though we see each other every day we don't really talk much anymore. we've gotten used to being quiet around each other. we don't fight, either but that's because we live two separate lives. we hardly ever discuss anything so there's nothing to fight about.
