

friends: hang in there

Rachel: Hey Ross, I was just _____ the dishes. I didn't even hear you come in.

Ross: Do you have a minute? There's something I need to talk to you about.

Rachel: Yeah, I was just about to take a break _____. What is it?

Ross: Listen, I know you and I haven't really had a chance to talk since Emily and I decided to get married, and I was just _____ how you were. I mean, if you were getting married I'd feel a little weird. So I just wanted to check to see how you're _____.

Rachel: Well, it definitely took me by surprise, but I'm okay. I guess I should have _____. You seem to like that girl a lot.

Ross: I do. I just want to make sure that it doesn't _____ you too much. And don't worry, some day things will _____ for you. All you have to do is just hang in there.

Rachel: Hang in there? Haven't you heard about this guy named Joshua? He and I have _____ each other for a while and it's pretty serious, actually.

Ross: Oh, I thought you guys had just been on, like, four dates, I didn't realize that had become anything yet.

Rachel: Oh no, it has become, it has. Those were four great dates. And if it _____, who knows what might happen. I may get married before you do.

Ross: Wow, that's incredible. I'm so happy for you, I really am.

Rachel: So let's _____, shall we? Anyway, I gotta get back to the dishes.

Ross: I gotta get to work, too. You know what would make me really happy? If the four of us could all _____ together. In fact, Emily's coming into town this weekend, why don't we all have dinner? _____, Sunday night?

Rachel: Sounds good. _____ we don't talk about getting married and stuff, because Joshua and I don't want to _____ it, ok?

anyway | as long as | been seeing | bother | call it a tie | coping | doing | hang out | jinx | keeps up | say | seen that coming | wondering | work out