PHOEBE: No! You should've read it _____.

RACHEL: Come on, Phoebe! Don't be such a goodie-goodie!

RACHEL: Thank you. What struck me most when reading Jane Eyre was how the book was so _____ of its time.

THE TEACHER: I suppose you're talking about feminism, in which case I think you're absolutely right.

RACHEL: Well, feminism yes, but also the robots.

RACHEL: That was so embarrassing! I mean, I was wondering why everyone was _____ me those strange looks but I just _____ they were _____ with my insights.

PHOEBE: I'm sorry. But I loved it when you started comparing Jane Eyre to Robocop.

RACHEL: How can you call that funny! I made a total ass of myself. I can't believe you let me go on and on like that.

PHOEBE: I _____! You weren't taking the class seriously.

RACHEL: Phoebe, come on! What is the big _____? I thought we were doing this to have a good time.

PHOEBE: I _____ want to have a good time but I also wanted to learn. I always hear people talk about what they learned in high school and I never _____ went to high school.

RACHEL: Oh, I wish I knew you actually wanted to learn. I wouldn't have _____ off so much. I'm sorry.
