

home alone (2) fool me once

"Well," Timo continued, "dad and mom wanted to _____ to you. They decided to get you that kit and time it _____ it would come on your birthday." – "Come off it, Timo. Do you really think I'm stupid enough to believe that?" – "No. I'm serious." – "Of course you are." – "Look, I wouldn't kid you a second time. _____ I saw how hard you took it on Christmas."

"You're a real pain, Timo, you know that?" I don't usually call _____ and I'd never called anyone a pain. I just happened to remember it from the time Thomas' mother came to get him out of our class. "A what?" It _____ Timo had never heard the word used that way. "A pain? What's that _____ mean?" – "It means that you're hard to _____ with. The stuff you say's a little hard to believe."

AFTER | PEOPLE NAMES | PUT UP | RELIEVED NOT TO | SO THAT |
SUPPOSED TO | THE NERVE TO | THEN AGAIN | TURNED OUT

We left it at that. Timo gave up trying to persuade me that he was telling the truth this time. For my part, I was _____ have to think about it anymore. Good thing that's _____ now, I thought. I was tired of hoping for things that I knew weren't going to happen. And now that there was no Timo to drive me crazy, I was lying awake remembering his little lies and _____ with some good answers which I didn't think of at the time. _____, Timo was keeping me awake long distance. _____ that he had told the truth this time? Was my autogyro kit actually on its way? Fat chance. _____, what if he was telling the truth? I mean, he wouldn't have _____ lead me on like that a second time. Or would he?
