

huck finn /2/ getting dirty looks

So when I knew I would be traveling through Hannibal, Missouri, I thought it would be great because I might see places that reminded me _____ scenes in Tom Sawyer or Huck Finn. A car dropped me _____ a mile or two before the town. I stood there _____ a while with my thumb out and my back pack standing next _____ me, but everybody drove _____ and looked at me _____ I was invisible.

One old guy pulled _____ in a pickup truck and I felt relieved because I was getting thirsty and tired and it was summer time and very hot. When I got to the guy's truck he drove _____ and his tires threw dust all _____ me. That guy was _____ sixty years old and I wondered why someone as old as he was would act that way.

I brushed as much of the dirt off me as I could and kept my thumb out, but everybody kept driving by, and sometimes people gave me dirty looks, like I was a bum who wanted to steal _____ them. I finally decided to walk _____ the town and get something _____ drink.

So I walked and all those many, many cars kept driving by. The people looked out at me _____ if I were in a cage _____ a zoo. I was the only person walking, everyone _____ had their cars. People don't walk much in America — it would make others think they are poor.
