

lisa & michael (1+2)

Lisa: Hi. My name is Lisa and we have never met and you have no idea who I am or why I'm calling you but I was wondering if maybe you could help me out. Please, don't hang up.

Michael: Uh... ok.

Lisa: I'm an American, as you can probably tell from my accent. I've been in this town for a few weeks now and I don't think I'll be leaving any time soon. There's this other American girl that I live with, Mary. You may have heard of her.

Michael: Uh... no.

Lisa: Anyway, we're living in this apartment near this kindergarten... why am I telling you this? I'm sorry. The thing is, I think I'm going to be staying here for quite a while and I'm sort of looking for people to hang out with. So I went to this bar last night and I talked to this guy and he seemed pretty drunk but he gave me your number and he said you might be interested in talking to me and maybe help me get a job.

Michael: Well...

Lisa: No, please hear me out. I'm not saying I want or expect you to get me a job. I just figured you might want to meet me and... I don't know. I've been trying to find someone who could explain to me how things work around here so I can talk to people. I mean, I wish I spoke Czech and I could just ask people questions but obviously I don't so I'm having a hard time fitting in. So anyway, I was wondering if you'd be willing to explain a couple of things to me that I still find confusing.

Michael: Sure, why not?

Lisa: Great. Why don't we meet at Mir?

Michael: Oh, so you already know Mir?

Lisa: Better than you do. Does tomorrow at nine work for you? Outside the main entrance?

Michael: Ok, I'll be there. Wait, how do I know it's you?

Lisa: Well, for one thing, I speak pretty good English. Just kidding. I'll be sitting at one of those long tables outside. I'm kind of short with wavy hair. Mary will be there too. And if you want to bring someone with you, that would be great. Preferably someone who speaks English.

Michael: All right, see you tomorrow then, confused wavy-haired short American girl.
