

I'd like to lighten things up a bit now, although Ned, we were certainly glad to hear from you, and how you got mugged.

It's about time we heard a nice story.

Something happened the other day that I think sums up why we call this the season of giving.

I was driving home from the gym, and I suddenly realized I had left my favorite old pair of sneakers on the roof of the car. I look back and there's this homeless guy, and he'd already picked them up, and he was putting them on, so I just thought, what the hell, and kept driving.

So you didn't put the car into reverse, speed back there, and rip a pair of smelly old sneakers out of a homeless man's hand?

It's been a pretty tough day out there for most of you, and I'd like to hear now from someone who's having a good Christmas. Someone who's learned a way to beat the holiday blues.

I used to get depressed on Christmas. And then I found a surefire way to beat it.

Why don't you go out and treat yourself to something special. Personally, I'm going to go get myself a meal at one of Seattle's fine restaurants. One that has a liquor license. Just kidding. Don't drink and drive.

All the other places in town are either closed or are all booked up. I've been to at least twenty of them. -- That's what makes this place so special.

Are you having a merry Christmas? -- Well, now that you ask, no I'm not. Had a terrible fight over something stupid with my father...

How about you? -- Pretty good, actually.

Merry Christmas. -- Same to you.
Glad you could make it.

I wouldn't miss this. How's the turkey? As good as last year's? -- I think this one actually is last year's.

I'm done here, why don't you take this seat? ... This is embarrassing, I seem to have lost my wallet.

I must have left the wallet at the office. Why don't I just go back there and get it. -- You mean you can't pay! This one's on me. It's ok, buddy, we've all been there.

I really did leave my wallet at my office. -- I know you did, and Bill here misplaced his Wall Street portfolio. I make a very decent living. I really do. You don't have to do this.

I must say I've never been so touched in my life. You people gave up your money to help out a fellow human being.

Don't be embarrassed. Look at it this way. The rest of the year belongs to the rich people, with their fancy houses...
