I didn't mean to overhear you say that. I know I wasn't supposed to hear it.

Actually I'm glad you heard. It's something I've been meaning to tell you for a long time.

So who is she? This woman you're so in love with. Who is she? You can't back out now.

Well, her name just happens to be Da...Phyllis. But no one calls her that. She prefers to be called Phyllis. It's much easier to remember.

I'm sorry to barge in on the two of you like that. I should have at least coughed or something.

Did you and Niles have a little chat?

He was a bit shy at first, but then he came clean. I couldn't be happier.

Let me be the first to raise a glass...

As long as you're doing the laundry, the kitchen towels could use a washing. Oh, and my oven mitts are getting a bit crunchy.

What the hell is going on? You have to clear this up.

All she heard was that I was in love with someone. She never heard who it was.

I panicked and blurted out the first name that popped into my head.

I'm dying to know more about her. So, have you asked her out yet? Was it love at first sight? Are you going to propose to her? Tell me. -- Actually, I'd rather not.

Dr Crane and I are talking about Phyllis. I'm so excited for him. I've just been giving him some dating advice.

All you need to know is that women go crazy for flattery. It doesn't matter if it's a big fat lie, they'll still buy it.

Tell me about this dream woman of yours. I can see you're crazy about her.

I've been a fool to hesitate as long as I have. -- That's the spirit!

I'm gonna do it! -- Good for you!

Don't leave time for second thoughts. You'd better go ask her out this instant. -- As a matter of fact, that won't be necessary.

I was wondering if you would like to have dinner with me sometime? You would? ... How about tonight at my place? ... Eight o'clock sounds great.