

pizza complaint /3/ think again, dude

"This guy comes in and is standing by the door _____ everyone out," Wheaton said. "Then I hear him ask Katie if the manager is in. I knew _____ that guy from the night before. This time, Vance _____, but I ran to the back and got Sid."

Though only a dishwasher, Sid Bricken, a 42-year-old recovering alcoholic and the oldest member of _____, was someone Wheaton believed _____ a manager. Bricken listened to the customer complain about Wheaton for nearly 10 minutes _____ sympathetically.

"I told the guy I'd put Matt on probation, and I also gave him a bunch of gift certificates and a two-liter bottle _____ soda he wanted," Bricken said. "He wanted to _____, but I told him I had to go do some manager stuff in the back."

"Marchese thought he _____ me," said Wheaton, opening an industrial-sized can of sliced black olives. "Well, think again, dude. Think again."

could outsmart » could pass for » it had to be » keep complaining » of whatever » really was gone » sort of checking » the general staff » while nodding