

I was in a good mood as I stepped out of the apartment. I walked down the street for about a block, then I stepped off the sidewalk and zig-zagged through the traffic to say hello to a friend waiting outside the movie theater across the street. it was still a long way to the pool so I stopped at a bar just off the main street between a church and a kindergarten. see, when you're at the pool, there are no bars nearby that you can go to. as soon as I walked into the bar I saw a line of people waiting to get a drink. there were at least seven people ahead of me and I decided to sneak past all of them to get near the bartender, whom I knew. while I was tip-toeing across the room I accidentally knocked a glass off a table and the beer spilled all over the floor. the guy whose glass I knocked got up and made a few steps towards me but seeing as I was among people who looked like they might be my friends he sat back down...