

PAUL: Jesus, you make a lot of noise. I'm trying to work here?

RASHID: I'm sorry. They just slipped out of my hands.

PAUL: to be clumsy?,
would it?

RASHID: I'm a teenager. Teenagers are clumsy. It's because we're still growing. We don't know where our bodies end and the world begins.

PAUL: The world is going to end if learn fast. Look, why don't you? cigarettes. Go around the corner to the cigar store and buy me two tins of tobacco.

RASHID: Twenty dollars is a lot of money. Are you sure you can?
I mean, a..... steal it?

PAUL: If you want to steal it, you won't be ..... making noise. It it.

PAUL: Jesus Christ. What is it with you? You one thing after another.

RASHID: I'm sorry. I was trying to one of the books up there ... And then, I don't know, this on top of me.

PAUL: It just? I sit here for two and a half years write a word, and then, when I finally something, when it looks start writing again, you show up and start breaking everything in my house.

RASHID: I didn't here. You invited me, remember? If you want me to leave, say so.

PAUL: How long here? Three nights, right? And how long did I tell you you could stay? Two or three nights, is that right? It sounds like, doesn't it?

RASHID: I'm sorry I very kind to me. But , right?

PAUL:, okay? It's, and I can't

RASHID: You apologize. The coast is probably clear now,

PAUL: Do you need some money? Some extra clothes?

RASHID: Don't me.

PAUL:, okay?

RASHID: You too. And before you cross the street. Oh, by the way, I liked your book. I think you're writer.
