

straighten up & fly right

/2/ the plan

Among the goals written on the abbreviated list: a thorough cleaning of his apartment, laundry, buying a bigger CD shelf, signing up for a T'ai Chi course, cashing in a large jar of loose change at the bank, updating his resume, looking for a new job, and "figuring out the whole Melanie thing." Olson's plan to straighten out his life first thing Monday morning got off the track the evening before.

"I was going to go to bed early Sunday so I could get up early Monday and start on all my projects," Olson said. "But then I realized I could go to Rocky's, where they have this really cool thing called Rocky's Sunday Night Record Jam, where this guy spins all these really cool old vinyl records. I normally never get to go because I have to get up at 6 a.m. Mondays, so I figured this was my big chance. But then I got a little more drunk than I'd planned."

Having woken up Monday, a hung-over Olson decided it would be a "day of recovery" and vowed to begin first thing Tuesday. After spending most of Tuesday in his bathrobe re-reading Harry Potter And The Chamber Of Secrets, Olson finally went to the basement that evening to begin the first of his many projects. "I decided the first thing I was going to do was unpack all the stuff in the basement," Olson said. "When I opened the first box marked 'Magazines,' it had nothing but a bunch of socks and my electric pencil sharpener. I got so pissed off with my lack of organization, I went back upstairs and started watching TV."